What have we been up to?

Year 1 geography students have just been to Exeter practicing fieldwork skills in preparation for their independent fieldwork investigation. Despite the chilly weather students learnt about rebranding of Princesshay, new developments at Sidwell Point and the impacts of University students on the physical environment. Some students even found time to hit the shops!

Recently in lessons we have been ...

We are now working towards our next trip to Dawlish Warren where we will be meeting the rangers from Dawlish Nature Reserve to find out about the impacts of tourism on an Internationally important habitat. This is an opportunity to study a dynamic coastal environment and develop an up to date case study of coastal management. Students will also be trialling ideas for their independent fieldwork investigation.

Fingers crossed for some sunshine!!
