What have we been up to?

This year, A-Level Law students have enjoyed a rich and varied programme of enrichment designed to deepen legal knowledge, build confidence, and develop essential employability skills. Our student led Law Society has played a central role, giving students a platform to shape activities, lead discussions, and drive their own legal learning.

We have welcomed several guest speakers. Adrian Fawden, Head of Personal Injury at Pardoes Solicitors, shared valuable insights into his area of expertise. Davitt Jones Bould visited to launch our bespoke Skills for Success Award, supporting students in developing and showcasing key employability skills sought by universities and employers. We were also joined by Avon & Somerset Police and the University of Law, offering students a broader view of careers across the legal and criminal justice sectors.

Our mooting programme has been a particular highlight. After winning the Wales regional heats, our mooting team is now preparing for the finals at the Royal Courts of Justice in London at the end of March, arguing cases involving firearm possession and drug offences. We also held our first internal mooting competition, sponsored by Albion Chambers, with winners receiving the prestigious Albion Shield.

In January, our Huish Law Fair 2026 brought together local law firms and Huish alumni for a full day of workshops, networking, and career conversations—an inspiring event for all aspiring lawyers.
